Nucleus bolsters finance function to support growth

Nucleus, the IFA-owned and controlled wrap, has expanded its finance team with the appointment of Nick Whitfield as Operational Accountant.

Nick's appointment follows the recent addition of Financial Accountant Cara Gray who joined the team in January. Nick joins Nucleus from RBS where he managed the projects team within Business Banking Financial Control. Prior to this, Nick spent three years at Ernst & Young within Financial Services Audit.

Reporting to chief financial officer, Aileen Mathieson, Nick will be part of the seven-strong team responsible for the current and future financial management of the business as it continues to implement its ambitious growth and development strategy.

Launched in 2006, the platform is in its sixth year of continued growth and the business has recently broken through the £4bn AUA barrier following a second consecutive quarter of profitable growth.

Commenting on the appointment, Aileen Mathieson said: "The past year has been an important one for us in terms of financial growth. As we continue to develop and grow the business it is vitally important we have the right people, with the right skills and experience in the right positions. Nick is one such person and is a much welcome addition to the team."
